WHY: Empowering women to become independent members of their community

“Connections for Life” is a nonprofit, one-year re-entry program for women who are returning to the community, primarily from prison. The program provides each woman housing, clothing, food, job placement assistance, transportation, financial literacy, assistance with family reunification and access to medical and mental health care. The goal of Connections for Life is to assist women in going from dependence to independence. Connections for Life works to help women help themselves.
